Two Fat Ladies in SE1

Jennifer Paterson and Clarissa Dickson Wright will be arriving in Borough Market on their motor bike and side-car to launch the Food Lovers' Fair. The free three-day fair, Southwark Festival's closing event, starts at 11am on Friday 6 November and food producers will be selling farm cheeses, home-made cakes, unusual bread, free-range and rare breed meat, vegetables, cheese, fruit and smoked food.

Demonstrations, using ingredients on sale in the market, will be given by TV cooks Jennifer Paterson and Clarissa Dickson Wright, Food Writer of the Year Sue Lawrence, Claudia Roden and Sophie Grigson. There will also be a Food Lovers' Café open all weekend.

The Fair is open on Friday 6 November 11am-7pm; Saturday 10am-5pm and Sunday 10am-4pm. Hotline for details: 0171 403 7400.

Mysteries revealed in SouthwarkThe Southwark Mysteries logo

The Southwark Mysteries, to be performed as part of the String of Pearls Millennium Festival, is being previewed in Southwark Cathedral this month.

The Mysteries, founded on playwright John Constable's poem cycle, is a developing community drama with poetry, music and song about London's outlaw borough called Southwark. The guide is an old Goose—a medieval prostitute of the Clink—who presents the area as a place of liberty giving birth to the future we are now invited to participate in. John Constable says: "It's an oral history from Mary Magdalen to the Ministry of Sound with the sacred being revealed in the profane."

John Constable, who has written many plays including The False Hairpiece performed at Southwark Playhouse, lives in Trinity Square. The project is being funded by Pricewaterhouse Coopers with support from Southwark Council, the Pool of London Partnership and the FT. The text will be published by Oberon Books next year.

The performance is on Friday 6 November at 7.30pm in Southwark Cathedral.

Antony and Cleopatra

The flag has come down at the Globe for the winter but you will find live Shakespeare just upstream at the Royal National Theatre. "Magnificent Mirren" is the verdict of The Daily Telegraph on Antony and Cleopatra directed by Sean Mathias at the RNT's Olivier Theatre. Helen Mirren is Cleopatra with Alan Rickman as a laid-back Antony in the epic tragedy. The cast also includes Finbar Lynch as Enobarbus, Raad Rawi as Lepidus and Samuel West as Octavius Caesar. The set designer is Tim Hatley and costumes are by David Belugo. Antony and Cleopatra was last staged at the Royal National Theatre more than a decade ago by Peter Hall. This time there are only 54 performances with the final night on Thursday 3 December.

Southwark hosts key environment conference

David Bellamy will be the keynote speaker at a major London-wide environment conference being held at Southwark Cathedral on Saturday 28 November.

The event is organised by the London & Southwark Dioceses Environment Group. There will be stalls and at least twenty workshops (from 10am) covering such topics as recycling, transport, whole foods, air pollution, water, fair trade, LETs schemes and Christian care for wildlife.

The Bishop of London will chair the main sessions involving Friends of the Earth and Going For Green.

Admission is £3.50 (conc £2). Registration forms, with workshop list, are available from Paul Buxton, Trinity House, 4 Chapel Court, SE1 1HW; 0171 403 8686.

Shopping Spree

The Oxo Tower Shopping Weekend runs from Friday 13 to Sunday 15 November with shops open until 9pm (Sun 8pm). The event coincides with the opening of the museum and Saturday's firework display at 5pm.

Architecture Week

There will be a chance to see how the planning process works during this month's Architecture Week.

The special 8-day Arts Council/Royal Institute of British Architects initiative runs from Thursday 12 to Thursday 19 November. Southwark Planning Office is holding an open afternoon and St Mary's Lambeth, now the Museum of Garden History, is opening its medieval tower to visitors. There will also be a chance to discuss the future of Somerset House opposite the South Bank.

Butler's Wharf-based Sir Terence Conran says: "I hope that Architecture Week will raise the quality of debate and, in turn, focus our attention on an appropriate architectural vision for our times."

The Museum of what?

The Museum Of is a series of temporary 'museums' which relate to plans to develop a Museum of the River Thames in the Bargehouse building behind the Oxo Tower. The project is involving SE1 residents and business people working with museum professionals to bring the familiar building back to life. The first museum is the Museum of Collectors featuring over forty different collections including carrier bags, Dolly Parton memorabilia, trolls, postcards, drinks cans and snails. Local resident Sophie Jones has lent her forty spectacles and her near neighbour is supplying an owls collection.

A live performance by the Nine Muses at 6.30pm on Friday 13 November will herald the official opening. Nine muses will abseil down the Bargehouse.

Later Museum of themes are Emotions, The Unknown, Me and the River Thames. The river show is due to be staged during the millennium year 2000 and is intended to be the forerunner of the permanent Museum of the River Thames in the Bargehouse. At present the nearest Thames museum to London is upstream at Henley.

Admission to both the opening event and the Museum is free.

Nation's treasures in SE1

Ten per cent of our national treasures are to be found in SE1. This is the verdict of an expert panel assembled by The Independent to pick the 50 best museums in Britain.

The winners in SE1 were MOMI, the Old Operating Theatre, the Imperial War Museum, Design Museum and the nearby Bramah Tea and Coffee Museum.

In addition at least three others, such as the Cuming Museum in Walworth Road, are within easy walking distance.

Book Review

Malta & Lower Marsh

November, when Remembrance Sunday recalls for us the horrors of the World Wars, is an appropriate time to read and enjoy David Franklin's novel Shoot the Model. Half is set in the East End during the last war, it offers a good description of life in London and in the forces. The second half is mainly set in today's Malta and SE1 with the action in Kennington Road, a Butler's Wharf conversion and local shops. La Barca by the Waterloo station 'Stage Door' plays an important role too. Superbly researched and very convincing. Shoot The Model by David Franklin (New Millennium; £7.95) is available from the famous travel bookshop Daunt Books at 83 Marylebone High Street W1 (0171 224 2295) or order at local bookshop.

Last Call for Round Table

This month is the last chance to cross the drawbridge and sit at the Round Table laid with wine, a boar's head, cheeses, pies and mussels. Or try to pull the sword from the rock. The Quest for Camelot at the Museum of Moving Image is the museum's 10th anniversary exhibition coinciding with the release of Warner Bros first full-length animated film The Magic Sword: Quest for Camelot. Real movie props from past films are on display. Admission to the exhibition is by way of the full MOMI experience. Camelot closes on Wednesday 18 November

Music for the Royal Fireworks

Guy Fawkes Night has not been forgotten by the Southwark Festival organisers who have organised a musical family evening at Hay's Galleria sponsored by Southwark Council and the Galleria. There will be food stalls and the British Festival Brass will be playing popular tunes from James Bond to Star Wars. The climax is Handel's Music for the Royal Fireworks, which will be accompanied by fireworks. The music starts at 6pm and admission is free. It is hoped that the annual 5 November casualty cases at Guy's and St Thomas' will be consigned to history with such events as this providing safe fun. British Festival Brass can also be heard at lunchtime at St George's Borough High Street

Church Focus

The Hidden Church

St Alphege stood at the south end of Lancaster Street from 1882 to just over a century later. The site, on the south-eastern corner of the King James Street crossroads, is now flats. The original Anglican red brick aisleless building was a well-known Anglo-Catholic shrine drawing people from all over London. Its curates included the late Percy Coleman. The easily missed new church is in King's Bench Street, round the corner from the former clergy house. The building, most visited when used as a polling station, has furniture from the old building. The Sunday service is at 9.30am except on the 4th Sunday of the month when there is a handy mass the night before at 7pm -Saturday night for Sunday •T 0171 407 2796
