London Festival of Architecture

The London Festival of Architecture builds on the success of the London Architecture Biennale held in 2006 (remember those sheep being driven across the Millennium Bridge?) with an even bigger programme of events.

The festival started on 20 June and runs until 20 July with the focus turning to each of the festival's five hubs in turn. The Southwark & South Bank Hub will come to the fore between Wednesday 9 and Sunday 13 July with installations, exhibitions, talks, tours, walks, films and performances organised by the Architecture Foundation.

Allies & Morrison architects on Southwark Street are hosting an exhibition called London South Central: Future Developments in South Bank and Southwark (page 6) showcasing major projects at Waterloo, Blackfriars Road, London Bridge and Elephant & Castle. An accompanying evening debate on Wednesday 9 July will focus on the future of the Elephant & Castle.

The Southwark Lido (pictured; see page 3) is a temporary installation on a vacant site in Union Street by French collective EXYZT providing a meeting and bathing space. The lido will host a variety of activities in an unusual environment.

The LFA brings together the cultural institutions along the south bank of the Thames for late night openings on the evening of Friday 11 July from The Hayward to the Design Museum (page 3). On the same evening parkour and skater films will be shown in the undercroft of the Queen

Elizabeth Hall which the Southbank Centre wants to reclaim for a new foyer. More than 4,000 people signed a petition to the Prime Minister calling for the retention of 'Skate City' and Boris Johnson described the potential loss of the skating space as "a great shame".

In Jubilee Gardens former RIBA president Jack Pringle is launching a bid to return the Festival of Britain Skylon to the South Bank (page 7).

The Urban Street Hunt - a photographic treasure hunt - on Saturday 12 July encourages the public to discover hidden spaces around SE1.

Bop to Architecture is a mobile installation coming to Shad Thames (Friday 11), Great Suffolk Street (Saturday 12) and Flat Iron Square (Sunday 13). During the afternoon visitors are invited to enjoy refreshments and listen to of audio samples recorded in Southwark's streets. In the evening the installation becomes a dance floor and party venue.

There is also an installation by artist Scott King on the hoardings at the abandoned 'Tate Tower' building site next to Tate Modern on Hopton Street. With an arresting graphic style King, a former art director at i-D and Sleazemation magazines, plays with the notion of the temporary structure, subverting its original purpose.

Look out for a giant wardrobe by artist Simon Fujiwara under the railway arches at the Union Gallery, Ewer Street (page 7).

The festival includes an extensive programme of bike tours led by architects and experts arranged in association with Southwark Cyclists. The full programme is shown on the website.

In brief

Free osteopathy for pregnant mothers

On Sunday 13 July the British School of Osteopathy is running a post graduate course for practicing osteopaths. The BSO needs 30-40 pregnant volunteers to be treated for free at the school outpatient clinic as part of this programme. Sessions will be 45 minutes in length throughout the day. To book a free treatment session call 020 7089 5308 or email Nina Waters at n.waters@bso.ac.uk quoting EMC/CPD.

Free junior tennis coaching

Tanner Street Park courts: Free junior tennis coaching Thursdays 5-6pm (10 and under) and 6-7pm (10 and over). Geraldine Mary Harmsworth Park: Free junior tennis coaching on Sunday mornings and Mondays after school. Also adult coaching 5 classes for £40. More hours at GMH and Tanner Street to be confirmed for the summer holidays. Information from www.southwarkcitytennisclub.org.uk or email southwarktennisclub@hotmail.co.uk or head coach Umran Ali on 07736 330542.

Happy-Go-Lucky

If you missed Mike Leigh's latest film when it was on general release in April you can catch it at BFI Southbank's studio cinema from 25 to 31 July. The opening scenes were shot in Lower Marsh and Crockatt &amp; Powell bookshop also features. Look out for Tower Bridge Primary School and the St John's Estate too. Another Southwark school – Pilgrim's Way off the Old Kent Road – also features. The DVD is out in August.

West Square event

It's just outside SE1 but worth a mention: West Square (off St George's Road) holds its Annual Garden Event on Saturday 12 July (2pm-4.30pm) with stalls, refreshments and entertainment.

Quay Players

Local theatre group The Quay Players – based at St Anne's Church Hall in Thorburn Square – are presenting musical romance Love Off the Shelf at Dulwich College's Edward Alleyn Theatre on 10, 11 and 12 July. Info: www.quayplayers.org.uk

Reel Lives

A free documentary filmmaking workshop for young people at BFI Southbank 4-8 and 18-22 August. With the help of professional filmmakers learn to plan, shoot and edit a short film. The finished films will be shown at The Times BFI London Film Festival. Places must be booked via alicia.blumross@bfi.org.uk or 07747 018474 and priority will be given to young people aged 16-19 who live or study in Lambeth or Southwark.

The Anchor Bankside

The Anchor Bankside pub reopened last month after a £1.6 million refurbishment. New features include a fish &amp; chip shop (cod &amp; chips to eat in or take away £7.99) as well as a tea room named after Samuel Johnson who is known to have frequented the Anchor. Tea for two is £14.95 or a simple cup of tea with a scone is £3.95. There is also a coffee shop on the corner of Bank End and Bankside.

Museum of Garden History

The Museum of Garden History's stand at the Hampton Court Palace Flower Show this month allows you to peer over the garden fences of two 1970s gardeners. Earlier this year the MGH put out an appeal for 1970s garden tools as it sought to devise a display illustrating the rapid change in garden practice during the decade that the museum was founded. The museum next to Lambeth Palace closes for a major revamp on 4 August and will reopen in the Autumn under the name The Garden Museum.

Bookcrossing

The Southbank Centre hosts the London Literature Festival from 5 to 19 July. The centre is an international bookcrossing site, encouraging you to share books by leaving them around the site for others to find. This year, hunt down 100 prize-winning paperbacks from the shortlist of The Best of the Booker Prize. Catch a new book or release your own. Look out for poet Lemn Sissay reciting from the roof of The Hayward on Saturday 12 July too. Full programme details at www.londonlitfest.com

BOOK REVIEW

The Greater London History & Heritage Handbook

Peter Marcan Publications • £25

It is nine years since the last edition of this handbook which was described then as “an indispensable reference tool”.

This latest version is not just an update but a rewrite. It is extraordinary that almost a decade on this book carries information not easily found, if there at all, on the web.

Those living in SE1 will find questions many would like to ask are answered such as: what is the difference between BRF and BOST? Waterloo residents will at last find an explanation of WCDG and WGT. And what is Better Bankside? Also, if Potters Fields Park is not run by the council how do you contact the park management?

Much of the large paperback, which has around 1,250 entries, is divided into London council areas but the Elephant & Castle has its own dedicated section. Those interested in planning applications will be pleased to find such useful information as contact and membership numbers for the Thorney Island Society which is objecting to proposed South Bank skyscrapers spoiling the view from Westminster.

Advertisements include one for Joy Levine's historic walks and the image library run by Peter Marshall who has recorded many events in Lambeth and Southwark.

The book, illustrated with black and white prints, is available for £25 plus £2.50 postage and packing from Peter Marcan, PO Box 3158, London SE1 4RA. Cheques should be made payable to 'Peter Marcan'.

Next month • August 2008

Carnaval del Pueblo procession from Elephant & Castle to Burgess Park • Festa! Brazilian community theatre at the Young Vic • London Poetry Festival • Live Olympic Picture Desk at National Theatre • all that and more in next issue
