HOLY WEEK begins in Borough Market. Southwark Cathedral's Palm Sunday Procession will begin in the Market at 11am on Sunday 13 April. After the blessing of palms and the reading of the Gospel, the procession will make its way along Bedale Street for the Sung Eucharist.

Thumbs up for C-Charge

MORE THAN three-quarters of those responding to a poll on the London SE1 community website are in favour of the Congestion Charge.

This figure reflects the views in other parts of central London although the scheme is thought to have been less successful around King's Cross on the boundary.

A massive 77% replied "yes" when asked 'Has the congestion charge had a positive impact on life in SE1?' Just 12% said "no" whilst 13% were undecided.

Many people report buses running faster than before the charge. Routes 63 and 45 now often enjoy a clear run down Farringdon Street and over Blackfriars Bridge into SE1. Transport for London has issued guidance to bus managers allowing them to ignore the timetable rather than keep buses waiting.

•Bristol Industrial Museum's 105-year-old Daimler which hasn't been on the road since 1947 has had a penalty notice for evading the congestion charge in London Road, SE1. The car has a maximum speed of only 15mph. TfL said "It would be ridiculous to expect there are not going to be individual errors."

The Coronet reopens at last

LONDON'S MAJOR new dance-to-arts venue opens in SE1 at Easter.

The Coronet, the three screen ABC Cinema which closed in 1999, opens its doors on Easter Eve Saturday 19 April.

The run-down venue, dating from the 19th century and known to Charlie Chaplin, has been restored to its 1920s Art Deco glory.

The cinema tradition continues with the opening of a 572-seater raked auditorium for film screenings as well as live performances. It will also provide a versatile home for regular club nights, live music, art house cinema screenings and special events.

Angela Reed who is overseeing the relaunch of the Coronet says: "The recreation of the Coronet is being driven by a team drawn from the club, cinema and theatre industries who all share a vision of a space that blurs the boundaries of traditional club and arts cultures. We are creating space, and entertainment, for an eclectic young audience looking for something fresh, individual, exciting and, above all, stimulating."

Not Cricket, a student design collective from Central St Martins, has been appointed as 'artists-in-residence'. Not Cricket is working on film, video, photography and illustration installations for the completed venue.

Jeremy Millins, Managing Director of The Pure Group, spotted the potential of the then derelict Coronet in 2001. He approached theatrical entrepreneur and founder of the production company Gekko, Dominic Madden, who acquired the venue and funded the redevelopment, with The Pure Group's management and consultancy arm contracted to oversee renovation work and provide ongoing management.

The restored interior will be unveiled to invited guests at a party a week before the official opening.

St George's set for restoration...ST GEORGE the Martyr in Borough has received £250,000 lottery funding to enable the historic church to prepare its restoration plans.

However, to provide its own share of funding the parish has had to sell its Halls in Lant Street for redevelopment. The proceeds of selling the building, the former St Michael's Church, is being divided between St George's and the Church Commissioners.

The replacement building will have the ground floor reserved for community use but most facilities are to be provided in St George's crypt.

St George's, which has a dangerous ceiling, is expected to be both filled and surrounded by scaffolding when the major work begins next year.

...but St George's Day is postponedST GEORGE'S Day is being held late this year as it falls on Easter Wednesday.

The day has been officially moved to the following Monday but SE1's two major events are on different dates.

St George the Martyr, one of the first churches to be dedicated to England's patron saint, is celebrating on Sunday 27 April with a Sung Eucharist at 10.30am followed by a bring-and-share lunch. St George's Cathedral is waiting until next month and keeping the day on Friday 9 May.

This year is the 1700th anniversary of St George's death in his Palestine homeland.

Blue Plaque fever

INTEREST IS mounting as the long campaign to choose Blue Plaques comes to its climax.

This year Southwark Council will put up 20 blue plaques to celebrate the people, places and events that shaped the history of the borough. The choice is by public ballot which closes on Monday 7 April.

Election posters depicting Mary Wollenstonecroft, Charles Dickens and Michael Caine have appeared around SE1 including Southwark Station.

Excitement is high at Copyprints Business Centre in Tabot Yard where staff and customers are campaigning for Geoffrey Chaucer. The business, just off Borough High Street, stands on the site of the Tabard Inn where Chaucer set the opening of his famous Canterbury Tales. Indeed the narrow Yard was the inn's yard.

Interest in a Chaucer blue plaque being placed on the Copyprints building is high not only among customers but also visitors. Support has come from Canterbury itself and America. Indeed so great is interest that a ballot box has been set up at Copyprints.

Other SE1 names among the 50 candidates include William Blake, Octavia Hill and Michael Faraday. Votes can be cast online via the Southwark Council website.

Meanwhile BBC Talent is looking for actors in SE1 interested in appearing in a modern day Canterbury Tales.

Sainsbury's Local

SAINSBURY'S LOCAL has opened in Waterloo Road and attracted large numbers of shoppers at lunchtimes.

The opening hours are 7am to 10pm daily and the late opening has attracted residents. Sainsbury's plans another branch for Borough High Street and a larger store in Stamford Street next year. Meanwhile Marks & Spencer will open a Simply Food outlet at Waterloo Station this month.

- Join the debate about shopping in SE1 at www.London-SE1.co.uk/forum
- www.sainsburys.co.uk
- Waterloo Road Post Office, on the corner of Stamford Street, will close on Friday 11 April. "There are too many branches in urban areas" said Head of Area Kevin Ray.

book review

Discovering London Street Names

YOU MAY have always wondered where the names such as Southwark, Marshalsea, Roupell, or Bear Gardens originated as street names. John Wittich's book (Shire Publications, £5.99) uncovers the mystery and history of numerous streets in the SE1 area.

Wittich's fascinating explanations and references are superbly detailed. Some street names that would seem straightforward-looking may turn out to be a surprise. The reader can take a stroll down the lanes or alleys of Saxon times and relive the history of their area.

From the SE1 area, Wittich gives an enthralling account of the origin of Marshalsea Road, which was named after the prison in which Charles Dickens' father was housed, Marshalsea Prison.

This book is both entertaining and educational. Any SE1 or London resident alike should own a copy of this walk down the streets of times past.

SARAH BRYAN

Saatchi Gallery opens this month

MODERN ART collector Charles Saatchi will open his new gallery in County Hall on Tuesday 15 April. The opening show is a retrospective of works by Damien Hirst. Exhibitions from Tracey Emin, Sarah Lucas and Jenny Saville will follow.

Saatchi, who made his fortune in advertising, has said: "The extraordinary rooms in County Hall will make an interesting setting for works like Hirst's shark and Emin's bed."

Like Tate Modern, the gallery will remain open until 10pm on two nights a week.

SE1 to gain new university?

THE ELEPHANT & Castle may be home to a second university. The London College of Printing is applying for university status as part of the London Institute. The request to the Privy Council for upgrading follows the Institute's acquisition of the large site alongside Tate Britain on the north bank to house Chelsea College of Art. South Bank University has a growing presence in the London Road-Newington Causeway triangle on the Elephant's north side.

SE1 artist on BBC London

DAVID BEGIE, whose distinctive work can be seen at Gallery Different in Shad Thames, has his giant hand sculpture Mixignal on show in the BBC London newsroom in Marylebone High Street. The work hangs from the ceiling above an atrium and is being seen from different angles during live BBC London News broadcasts in the early morning and at 1.30pm, 6.30pm and 10.25pm. His work can also be seen in Colorado and a Hampshire church.

CHORUS MUNDI
Waterloo-based Chorus Mundi flies to Nice this month to give performances in Holy Trinity, the historic English Church, and St Peter's Church. The singers will be in the South of France from Thursday 24 April to Thursday 1 May. The choir recently sung Rachmaninov Vespers at a Greek Orthodox Church.

WOMEN BISHOPS
Canon Richard Truss, Vicar of St John's Waterloo, is one of 204 priests backing the Priests for Women Bishops campaign. "We can see no reason why we should not have women bishops, and we want them as soon as possible" says Canon Truss. The aim is to obtain the support of at least half of all Anglican clergy.

BANKSIDE TRADERS AGM
Bankside Traders Association held its AGM at Shakespeare's Globe. Chris Barlow of SE1 Gallery, re-elected chairman for 2003-4, reported on the appointment of a Small Business Development Co-ordinator as part of a drive to provide business back-up. Guest speakers from Better Bankside gave a presentation.

Simply Heavenly Young Vic

SITTING WAITING for Simply Heavenly to begin one is already in a Harlem bar. Opening night was on St Patrick's Day so it seemed appropriate for Paddy's Bar to be emblazoned across the back. At the interval one felt like walking over to the counter and asking for an ice cream.

Although it was more than thirty minutes before the songs started this is a fast moving show. The actors are not well-known which makes the simple story even more engrossing. Jess Semple is a hard working fellow living in a tiny rented room and tempted by a local good time girl. But his real love is a young lady living in another rented room. This is the 1950s so although this show has lots of bedroom scenes there is no sex. Instead the poverty and farce are cues for songs and stunning dance from the bar regulars. Watch the barman; he never stops working.

- Simply Heavenly continues until Saturday 12 April.

LEIGH HATTS

Deja Vu Westminster Bridge Rd

THE LOCAL area is awash with cafes and bars - too much so many residents may feel. However, "new kid on the block", Deja Vu at 137, Westminster Bridge Road, certainly cheers up a rather dreary corner of North Lambeth. Its bright interior is attractively furnished throughout in terracotta and blue, with simple wooden furniture. The owners are French-Algerian and this small cafe certainly has something of the feel of France. The food though is neither French or Algerian alas, but the standard cafe fare of baked potatoes, English salads and omelette and chips. What a missed opportunity! The coffee is good however, and for £2.20 you can buy a "French breakfast" of a large coffee or chocolate with croissant, pain au chocolat or croquet. Regular costumers get a 10% discount. Worth checking out.

Cottesloe Theatre; 7.30pm; £10-£25
24 hours. 20 characters. 40 scenes. Belfast City. An urban story. This tantalizing intro is for a new play by Owen McCafferty, who was the winner of the Paines Plough/Granada Award 1999. The cast includes Kathy Kiera Clarke, Ruairi Conaghan, Chris Corrigan, Darren Healy, Packy Lee, Karl Johnson, Gerard Jordan, Aoife McMahon, Eileen Pollock, Frances Tomelty, Harry Towb and June Watson.

Wednesday 9 April to Saturday 31 May JERRY SPRINGER

Lyttleton Theatre; 7.45pm; 10£-£34
An opera about a talk show? Richard Thomas, composer for the opera, said of the show: "It's got tragedy. It's got violence. There are people screaming at each other and you can't understand what they're saying. It's perfect for opera." Beginning life at Battersea Arts Centre, the concert version was the hit of the Edinburgh Festival 2002.

Friday 25 April to Monday 12 May HONOUR

Cottesloe Theatre; 7.30pm; £10-£25
UK première of Joanna Murray-Smith's insightful play showing the failure of a marriage. Cast includes Eileen Atkins and Corin Redgrave. The play poignantly examines the effects of one man's decision to renounce his marriage vows and begin living with a much younger woman. Not just a simple play about adultery, the play examines the nature of what makes one particular human unfaithful, the reason we sacrifice for marriage, and the price of individual choices.

Manolo Blahnik Design Museum

HAVE YOU ever wanted to look into the detailed mind of a visionary shoe designer? If you visit the Design Museum's exhibition of the designer Manolo Blahnik you can see why these exquisite and elegant shoes are legendary. With no formal training, Blahnik truly is a genius who has perfected the artistic expression of his craft.

The presentation examines every detail of the stages of design. The majority of the exhibit is a timeline of shoes. You can see fabulous styles from the early 1970s to current trends of Blahnik's famous stiletto. The exhibition is concluded with a video montage of clips from Sex and the City, the programme which brought the word "Manolo's" into our vocabulary as slang for irresistibly stylish shoes. Being coveted by everyone from Madonna to Kate Moss, Manolo Blahnik has truly created an imaginative world of refined and unique design.

SARAH BRYAN

Shelley Thomas Gabriel's Wharf

"MOST PEOPLE think blacksmiths are for shoeing horses," laughs Shelley Thomas, owner of a new shop in Gabriel's Wharf. However, a horseshoe is the last thing one would notice among her beautifully adorned wrought iron pieces.

The shop's selection ranges from candlesticks that look like modern art pieces (£40-£50) to the heart-covered double bed frame (£2,950) which dominates the shop.

Thomas was originally trained as a jeweller but says her work "simply became bigger." She has certainly been able to take more artistic licence, creating a £35,000 Christmas tree for a Save the Children charity project and also forging installment art pieces for various areas of London. She says she is willing to take any commission, constructing pieces as varied as decorative furniture, handrails, curtain poles and even handcuffs.

- Open Wed-Sun afternoons.

Hopton Street

REARRANGING FURNITURE can be a dynamic and room-changing experience, unless the furniture is being moved to another borough!

Trendy residents of SE1 will be excited to find that Furniture Union is no longer planning to move from its space on Hopton Street near Tate Modern. In fact, it's getting a facelift.

Furniture Union, owned by Mandy Taylor-Jones, has been in the SE1 area for nearly five years. The store specializes in contemporary designer furniture at affordable prices. However, due to recently rising rent costs, Jones considered moving the gallery to a more cost effective location.

Now that rents have stabilised, Jones is relaunching the store with a new manager, Jane Rawlings, who plans to change the focus of the outlet to reflect a retail emphasis. The store has new later opening times and will be receiving new ranges and a new catalogue. Another feature of the re-launch will be lower prices on many furniture items.

"People who live in this area are design aware," says Jones. Jones displays chairs in Tate Modern and also furnishes the National Film Theatre Cafe and provides its surrounding outdoor benches. However, she says she wants to provide furniture that is not only genuinely stylish but also affordable. She has items ranging from vase shaped coffee tables (£35) to a unique chaise longue (£1,100).

Harry Handelman has sold his penthouse on top of Bankside Lofts for £2m. The Manhattan Loft Corporation chairman moved in during 1998 having redeveloped the building which stands on the site of the Swan Theatre known to Shakespeare. The yellow circular tower on top, designed by Piers Gough, is probably one of the worst additions to Bankside since it blocks the view of St Paul's dome once enjoyed by residents on the Rochester Estate. But for the Lofts' addition there would now be a wonderful view of the cathedral from Blackfriars Road across the vacant Palestra site.

It's a pity that Harry Handelman bafflingly describes his move to Hyde Park as "moving to central London". SE1 is real central London which is why there is such concern about the 33-storey London Bridge Tower. The future of this plan to build Europe's tallest building will be decided at an inquiry sitting in Bankside House where the slow-moving and inconclusive Thameslink 2000 hearing sat for almost a year. Developer Irvine Sellar says: "People like height". Arts commentator Richard Morrison warns that Southwark Cathedral "will have to crouch by its new neighbour like a cabbage by a lamp-post".

What should the Congestion Charge inspectors be doing? Apparently they should check the registration of any parked car on their handheld computer. If the vehicle is recorded as having outstanding charges from previous days then clampers are called in. An in SE1 reporter asked one of the team in Blackfriars Road how many non-payers they had found. The answer was "none, ever". So the scheme is working.
