The Coin Street site in 1984

COIN Street Community Builders is mounting a 20 Years of Change exhibition at the Bargehouse on Oxo Tower Wharf. The South Bank site was derelict when purchased by CSCB in 1984.

CSCB, a development trust and social enterprise seeking to make the South Bank a better place in which to live, to work and to visit, has transformed the site by overseeing the completion of the riverside walkway; the creation of Bernie Spain Gardens, Gabriel's Wharf and Oxo Tower Wharf as well building 220 new homes.

Through pictures and words, the exhibition will chart changes to the Coin Street neighbourhood.

"The changes have brought money and jobs to the area and it's put us on the map" says Jennifer Mosley, local resident and Colombo Centre community outreach worker. "People used to say 'Oh you live in Waterloo, what platform do you live on!'"

Canon Richard Truss of St John's Waterloo recalls his first morning at St John's when he had to walk over a sea of bodies to get into the church. "The Bullring, where the IMAX is now, was full of homeless people. That has dramatically changed for the better thanks to government initiatives and people working in that field."

Kevin Phillips, who runs Phillips Framing at The Gallery in Lower Marsh and lives in Roupell Street, says: "The council's attitude hasn't changed. We're still the bottom end of the borough. But what I like best is where it is. As far as I can make out we're the dead centre of London."

Campaigner and CSCB Chair Ted Bowman strikes a cautious note about change. "I know people say things have to change but sometimes there's a greed about the change from those that want to make a piece of land expensive, and that's no benefit to local people."

At the exhibition there will be an opportunity for visitors to have their say on the changes and how they would like to see the area change in the future.

Young Vic closes this monthTHE Young Vic closes for rebuilding after the last performance of Cruel & Tender on Saturday 10 July. The café run by Konditor & Cook is also closing.

The present theatre was built in 1970 to last five years but now this 'temporary structure' is falling down. "With soaring maintenance costs, rebuilding has become essential not optional" says the theatre management.

The new complex has been designed by Haworth Tompkins Architects. The now world-famous auditorium will be left intact and restored with a number of technical improvements. The butcher shop foyer will also survive as the new box office but everything else will be replaced. New foyers should mean an end to queuing outside in the rain.

Shawcross returned to AssemblyLABOUR'S Val Shawcross was returned as Lambeth and Southwark's London Assembly member.

Whilst the Labour vote fell almost five per cent, Val Shawcross still held on with a 5475 majority. A strong campaign by Liberal Democrat Caroline Pidgeon delivered a four and a half per cent increase in the Lib Dem vote. The Conservative vote fell more than three per cent compared to the 2000

City Hall was a hive of media activity for several days after the 10 June poll, with the London region European election results declared at the GLA HQ on Sunday evening.

Within days of the election Shawcross was re-appointed chair of the Albert Embankment-based London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority by Mayor of London Ken Livingstone.

Champor-Champor branches out into retail

A NEW shop Mari-Mari is opening in Snowfields selling a unique selection of South-east Asian arts and homeware as well as a range of one-off fashion clothing and jewellery items designed by Adu Amran Hassan. The shop is a spin-off from Champor-Champor round the corner where diners often ask where they can buy the artworks and artefacts that decorate the restaurant. Mari-Mari is being launched on Thursday 8 July during an open evening of other businesses including

Eley Kishimoto, Cockfighter of Bermondsey, the Percy Miller Gallery and the Zandra Rhodes Fashion & Textile Museum. At Mari-Mari drinks and canapés will be served and there will be a 25% discount on all goods. •www.champor-champor.com

Elephant architects named

MAKE architects have been appointed by Southwark Council to advance the Elephant and Castle Development Framework.

John Prevc will head up the MAKE team and work with former Foster & Partners colleague Ken Shuttleworth in overseeing detailed urban design as a prelude to architectural work on proposals for the core area.

“The Elephant and Castle is a passion for Ken, the MAKE team and me” says John Prevc. “Jointly with the rest of Southwark’s masterplanning team, we believe this to be the most important urban regeneration project in London. We are delighted to be selected to take this work forward.”

Sports academy to promote fitness

VAUXHALL MP and former sports minister Kate Hoey helped to launch the new Academy of Sport, Physical Activity and Wellbeing at London South Bank University.

The Academy aims to enhance sporting excellence and healthy living both within the university and throughout the community by being a hub for sport and exercise within London.

The launch also unveiled a new scheme aimed at helping talented, athletes in Southwark and Lambeth, which has been set up by London South Bank University, Southwark and Lambeth councils and leisure service providers Leisure Connection and Fusion.

Countess visits cathedral

THE Countess of Wessex has opened Friendship House hostel in Belvedere Place, off Borough Road. This, the flagship hostel of the London Hostels Association, offers short and long-term accommodation for young people.

Afterwards the Countess toured Southwark Cathedral where she has succeeded Princess Margaret as Patron of the Friends of Southwark Cathedral.

Cathedral School tercentenary

‘THREE Hundred Years of Growing and Listening’ was the theme of the service of celebration for the tercentenary of Cathedral School held in Southwark Cathedral.

Archbishop of Canterbury Rowan Williams, wearing a bright cope of Kente cloth given to him in Ghana, was welcomed by the entire congregation singing ‘Happy Birthday’.

He spoke about how the community and life of the school gives both children and adults a language to learn to understand each other, commenting that the formally posed 17th-century children illustrating the service booklet looked lonely and fearful.

Headteacher Sylvia Morris said: “We feel proud and privileged to welcome the Archbishop to share in our service of celebration and thanksgiving.”

Between Prison and Palace

THE Borough’s St George the Martyr Church, although rebuilt twice, dates from around 1120 and is one of the earliest to be dedicated to England’s patron. Today’s rector Tony Lucas reveals its importance in his book Between Prison and Palace (Carmeyon £5.95) which has been written, printed and published in SE1. The Rector’s predecessors include Italian Giovanni Gigli who was appointed in 1477. He acted as poet laureate by writing a poem celebrating Henry VII’s wedding and employed Caxton to print parish notices. The new rector in 1190 was another Italian Peter Carmelitanus. He moonlighted as the King’s Latin Secretary and was probably responsible for handling Papal letters allowing Henry VIII to marry Catherine of Aragon. The many friends of Carmelitanus included Erasmus. This is a fascinating and carefully researched book. A vital addition to SE1 history studies.

GOBLIN THEATRE COMPANY

The Goblin Theatre Company is staging its first production A Midsummer Night’s Dream at the Lambeth Mission opposite Day’s Hotel in Lambeth Road. The Goblin Theatre aims to produce “clear, straightforward classical theatre” and recruit SE1 actors just out of drama school as well as older actors returning to the stage.

YOUNG PILGRIMS

The Young Pilgrims helped 4,000 visitors during weekends this year between Easter and the Spring Bank Holiday. The 14-16 year olds are all Southwark students or residents. The scheme, now in its seventh year, is part of the Duke of Edinburgh Award. This year’s first graduates received their certificates during a river trip.

Much Ado about Nothing at Shakespeare's Globe

MARK Rylance continues an innovation made last year with an all-female production of Much Ado about Nothing at the Globe. And as Barry Norman never said, 'Why not?'

This play, most famous for the witty sparring between would-be lovers Benedick and Beatrice, packs in most of Shakespeare's favourite devices, such as masked identity, overheard conversations and an apparent resurrection from the dead.

For my money, I would have preferred to see Josie Lawrence, who plays Benedick, cast as Beatrice, since she has the superior one-liners. The crowd enjoyed Sarah Woodward's idiot 'policeman' Dogberry and Penelope Beaumont is quite brilliant in her portrayal of heartbroken father Leonato. A play of laughter and of sorrow, it would be wrong to class Much Ado as a comedy - instead it takes its audience on an Elizabethan roller-coaster, with a poignant and reflective last scene at the end of the ride.

Breakfast at the Founders Arms

THE usually crowded Founders Arms is a different place early on a summer morning. The doors are open and any alcohol smell from the night before has gone. Breakfast is served from 9am when you can sit at the window tables or even on the terrace enjoying the view of St Paul's Cathedral with the riverbuses passing below. The only occasional noise comes from the lawnmower outside Tate Modern.

The Founders Arms full breakfast (£4.95) includes fried egg, sausage, beans, two tomatoes, mushrooms, plenty of bacon and two slices of toast and butter. Although coffee is extra the cappuccino (£1.75) was good quality and in a generous cup. We arrived just after 9am and service was swift which is helpful for those having to go on to work or meetings.

Some might find Radio 2 inside a distraction but on our visit one record included Waterloo Sunset.

Edward Hopper Tate Modern

IN Edward Hopper's paintings, all the scenes seem to be conducted by lighting: whether by the sunlight streaming into rooms onto vacant faces or by being lit from within; a staging with the figures ready.

Even his landscapes have a quality of beginning. Figures seem always to be looking through the space between and none of the sightlines are for us. This sense of the moment, where action is suspended, without apparent purpose, surrounds Hopper's work and is far more naturalistic in intent than Magritte or Rousseau, despite the echoes of isolation and mystery.

For this exhibition, the Tate has opened up all its own sightlines and uncovered every window: go on a bright morning and the slanting sunlight will enliven your enjoyment of these extraordinary paintings.

•Edward Hopper is at Tate Modern until Sunday 5 September; admission £9 (conc £7)

shopping focus

Design Museum Shop at Shad Thames

LOVERS of good design seeking original ideas for their home, should hot foot it down to the Design Museum at Shad Thames. They will find a lot to delight them; Pigeon-shaped lamps in magenta, grey and orange £55, a Moosk radio shaped like a space-craft £30, covered salad bowls £29 and a strange Tardis like tray with spikes turns out to be a very effective plate rack. There are also exquisite wrap-round sunglasses £15, the ever-popular stainless steel Mikro Man characters and for children wonderful wind-up metallic toys £9.95. The most expensive item in the shop is a lamp-shade made entirely from polystyrene coffee cups £199, designed by Paul Cockesedge. There are also lots of cards and design books on sale and interesting loos with portraits of famous designers on the toilet doors and walls. The exhibitions are pretty good too.

reviewHarry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban

HARRY Potter is on the triple-decker purple Knight-bus heading for SE1 soon after the dramatic opening of Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban.

The vehicle challenges red buses on Lambeth Bridge before pulling up in Borough Market outside the Leaky Cauldron.

Forbidden to wander due to danger, Harry gazes out of an upstairs window at the tower of Southwark Cathedral as the market seethes below.

But soon he is back at Hogwarts boarding school. There are extraordinary happenings and, as always with a new school year, new characters. David Thewlis as Professor Lupin and Emma Thompson as Divination Professor Sybill Trelawney give good performances. The film's own stars are of course Danielle Radcliffe as Harry Potter with Rupert Grint and Emma Watson as the companions.

•Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban (PG) opens in IMAX format at the BFI London IMAX Cinema on Monday 19 July. Booking 0870 787 2525.

Talks & MeetingsCalder Bookshop51 The Cut T 020 7633 0599
www.calderpublications.comThursday 1 July*TWO PERSIAN DISSIDENT WRITERS
6.45pm; £4 (conc £2)

Omar Khayyam in the 11th century and Sadeq Hedayat in the last century are the two Persian writers who made an international impact – each violating the accepted limits of their culture while helping to define it. Khayyam's Rubaiyat and Hedayat's stories and novel The Blind Owl are contrasted by John Calder with readings by actors. "The perfume of the East mingles with ghosts, sex and epicurean philosophy."

Thursday 8 JulyTHE VOICE: A PLAY READING

6.45pm; £4 (conc £2)

John Calder's The Voice was a Sixties play depicting a waking and fading consciousness where the protagonist finds himself propelled in different directions by two women and a disembodied voice. David de Kaiser recorded the role of The Voice for the play's original production at the Traverse in Edinburgh in 1965. Sam Wanamaker directed a revival the following year at the Liverpool Everyman. De Kaiser reads the part again and actors take on the other roles.

Thursday 15 JulyTHE FACES WE DESERVE

6.45pm; £4 (conc £2)

Oscar Wilde's The Picture of Dorian Gray and Max Beerbohm's The Happy Hypocrite were novels about the ways our characters are hidden or revealed by our faces. A group of actors will read from these two very different but poignant stories and a discussion follows.

Thursday 22 JulyFIRST WORLD WAR WRITING: THE GERMAN VIEWPOINT

6.45pm; £4 (conc £2)

Erich Maria von Remarque, Ernst Junger, Franz Werfel, Karl Krauss and others depicted the First World War from their own perspective. Readings by actors bring out the pity, the horror, the patriotism and the disillusionment.

Thursday 29 JulyWH AUDEN: POET OF THE THIRTIES AND BEYOND

6.45pm; £4 (conc £2)

Actors read the poetry of W.H. Auden and his biographer Charles Osborne comments.
