This is the place to be!

The best days of the Old Vic are yet to come according to Canadian impresario David Mirvish who has sold the theatre to a trust which will preserve the historic building.

David Mirvish, an honorary member of the trust, hopes that there will be room for companies like the Almeida's The Iceman

Cometh which has filled the theatre.

"I see extraordinary change" says Mirvish. "There's the coming of the Jubilee Line, the Globe, the Young Vic and the prospect of a footpath across the Thames. I'd say this is the only part of London with explosive potential. That's got to be good for the Old Vic."

New Bishop of Southwark to be enthroned

Dr Thomas Butler will be enthroned as Bishop of Southwark in Southwark Cathedral at 11am on Saturday 12 September.

A familiar voice on Radio 4's Thought for the Day, Tom Butler will become the 9th Bishop of Southwark. The Diocese, which also embraces Lambeth, was carved out of the Rochester Diocese in 1905 although for most of history it was part of the Winchester Diocese -hence Winchester Wharf and Square. The Bishop of Southwark is Anglican (Church of England) whilst the Archbishop of Southwark is Roman Catholic with his throne in St George's Cathedral. Archbishop Bowen will be present at Bishop Butler's

I-Spy the Pie Shop

Michelin Man 'Bibendum' is 100 years old and promoting the 50th anniversary of I-Spy books. Featured in the new I-Spy London are around forty SE1 sights including R.Cooke's pie and mash shop in The Cut. Children can also tick off such historic landmarks as County Hall, the lion on the end of Westminster Bridge, The Ring on Blackfriars Road, the Captain Bligh blue plaque in Lambeth Road and Lower Marsh market. I-Spy London costs £1.99.

enthronement.

Bishop Butler comes to London having been Bishop of Leicester but he was a London bishop from 1985 until 1991 when he served as Bishop of Willesden.

The enthronement service is ticket only but Bishop Butler will publicly knock on the outside of the cathedral door with his crosier at 11am before being welcomed by the Provost and Chapter.

Bishop Tom Butler, succeeds Bishop Roy Williamson who retired earlier this year after six years in office.

Outdoors Indoors at the National

Out on the Windy Beach comes appropriately from the Brighton Festival to the South Bank on Saturday 22 August, for a couple of free performances at 6pm and 10.30pm at the Royal National Theatre. The all female Cholmondeleys join their male brother company the Featherstonehaughs which were both formed under the artistic direction of choreographer Lea Anderson. Performed with live music, Out on the Windy Beach looks at our relationship with the natural world now involving such barriers as protective clothing and sun block. More holiday fun starts on Friday 4 September with reduced price previews of the new comedy Cleo, Camping, Emmanuelle and Dick at the RNT's Lyttelton Theatre.

Shooting in SE1

A film is being shot in SE1 this August by the Union Street based Whatever Pictures.

Don't Walk, directed by the award-winning Colm McManus and Tom Heaney, is from the same stable as Green Monkey which was shot in SE1 and won critical acclaim at film festivals.

Whatever Pictures partnership of Alex Lewis and Bruce Webb is set for further expansion into corporate videos and advertising. Also being formed is a script bank open to new talent.

Fax your Millennium ideas

It is just 17 months to go before the Millennium and the Waterloo Action Centre is appealing now for both ideas and people willing to participate in planning what is being called the 'Waterloo village' celebrations. Half a century after the South Bank and Waterloo hosted the Festival of Britain, Ann and Babs at the Centre are ready to hear from those living and working in the area on 261 1404. Millennium ideas and offers can also be faxed on 928 1252.

It's Open House along the South Bank

The Henry Wood Hall in Trinity Church Square will be among the buildings open on at least one day during the annual London Open House Weekend on 19 and 20 September.

The London Open House scheme celebrates the capital's closed in 1960 and after more than a decade the interior was gutted by fire. The pleasing conversion is by Arup Associates. The building's setting is Trinity Church Square which recently featured in the BBC television programme the House Detectives. The statue

Riverside buildings seen from Bankside are also opening their doors. The most notable is the new Vintners Place with its 50 foot portico at the end of Southwark Bridge. This building was only completed in 1993 and the interior marble is partly inspired by St wealth of architecture by coordinating the opening of usually closed building for free viewing by the public. Sponsors include The Guardian and GLR.

The weekend will open up several little visited buildings in SE1 as well as many familiar riverside landmarks.

Southwark's Henry Wood Hall is the former Holy Trinity Church which became an orchestral recording and rehearsal hall in 1975. The church, noted for its six giant Corinthian columns, was built in 1824 on land given by Trinity House in William IV's reign. The church was outside is the Henry Wood Hall dates from the 14th century and is the oldest in London.

Also taking part in the free viewing days are Kirkaldy's Testing Museum next door to the Holiday Inn in Southwark Street. Kirkaldy's, built in 1877, contains David Kirkaldy's 350 ton force materials testing machine where the Tay Bridge samples were tested after the great disaster.

The nearby Old Operating Theatre and Herb Garret in St Thomas Street will also be open free to visitors. Churches taking part include St George's in Borough High Street.

Peter's Basilica in Rome.

The City of London's normally high security Custom House opposite Hay's Wharf will also be open. The City of London School built just 12 years ago opposite Bankside is opening along with the College of Arms on high ground behind. This mansion dates from the early 1670s when the Heralds would have a good view over Winchester Park on the south bank.

Special leaflets will be available at libraries from September. The Open House Information Line is 0891 600 061 (charged at 50p a minute).

Book Review

Docklands Old & New

Artist, writer and wine expert James Page-Roberts has written what he describes as a "personal, anecdotal and historical guide" to the riverside. Dockland Buildings Old and New (Mudlark Press £5.95) is a series of eight walks which make up a guide to the Thames from Tower Bridge to Greenwich along both banks. The route from Butler's Wharf points out where Lord Snowdon lived when courting Princess Margaret and reminds us that Samuel Pepys popped over to the south bank to visit Cherry Garden and the Angel pub. On the north bank the author suggests a diversion to Three Mills to see where the ITV London Bridge soap opera set in SE1 is filmed. A walk with James Page-Roberts is never dull.

Exhibition Review

A Gucci First in SE1

The work of Charles and Ray Eames exhibition at the Design Museum is the first arts sponsorship by Gucci in the UK. Gucci Creative Director Tom Ford says: "For me, Charles and Ray Eames were two of the most innovative thinking designers of the 20th century. The influence of their work can still be seen today. So many of today's new designs are drawn from things that Charles and Ray did in the Forties and Fifties." The exhibition opening on Tuesday 15 September will provide the first opportunity to see in this country the full range of work produced by their studio in America.

Web Watch

sbc.online

SE1's largest venue appropriately has one of the most sophisticated Web sites. The South Bank Centre's site is well-designed but not always easy to navigate. The same content is accessible through a number of self-explanatory URLs such as sbc.org.uk and hawardgallery.org.uk Even the little-known Poetry Library has its own dedicated section. It is now possible to book tickets online, although the availability page is only updated once a day. There is an online mailing list to receive regular updates from the Centre. This site is a good online way to keep track of events outside the scope of Virtually in SE1.

Church Focus

The Bishop's Seat

Southwark Cathedral, S preparing for the enthronement of the new Bishop, is a parish church which became a cathedral early this century. St Swithun of weather fame founded a convent on the site which later became a monastery. Henry VIII's closure of the priory led to the main building becoming the parish church. William Shakespeare is believed to have been present
when baby John Harvard, founder of the American university, was baptised here in 1607. This is the year that William's own brother Edmond was buried between the choir stalls. Nearby is the Shakespeare memorial. There is no admission charge to this hidden cathedral.

Paul Nash at Imperial War Museum's WWI exhibition

Paul Nash at Imperial War Museum: Void of War by Paul Nash can be seen at The First World War Remembered exhibition which opens at the Imperial War Museum on 19 September. The exhibition marks the 80th anniversary of the end of what was then called the Great War. Paul Nash (1889-1946) attended art classes in Fleet Street and went on to design book-jackets, rugs, stage sets, ceramics, glassware and posters. Many Londoners have sat on his seat moquette upholstery on the buses.
