Southwark Festival

The Southwark Festival programme is reflecting the new enthusiasm for the annual music, drama and visual arts feast based in buildings between Southwark and Tower Bridges.

The Festival, backed by Melvyn Bragg and Sir Jeremy Isaacs, officially opens on 10 October with a Family Weekend of fun in Borough Market. The month long Festival will climax in London's oldest market in November with a Food Lovers' Fair.

The music programme includes lunchtime concerts in the cathedral and St George's Church. There are six art exhibitions from the Cathedral to South Bank University.

"We are certain that whatever your taste you will find something to please" says Festival Director Michèle McLusky who has a team for the Festival Hotline (0171 403 7400). "We are waiting to hear from you!"

Arts flagship opens in Union Street

Artist's impression of the new venue in Union Street

The Jerwood Space, SE1's innovative flagship arts centre in Union Street, has opened its doors to the public.

The launch ceremony was performed by Culture Secretary Chris Smith who reminded guests that the Jerwood Foundation had received financial assistance from the Arts Council Lottery Fund.

The Space is housed in a now barely recognisable former Victorian school. The very first guests, welcomed by Director Richard Lee, were the neighbours from nearby flats who had known the original century old building as 'Orange Street School'.

In addition to the art gallery, with a year round exhibition programme, there is a sculpture space and huge dance studios. A café is open daily to the public from 10am.

The building conversion, undertaken by the Paxton Locher architectural team, also provides room for arts-related businesses. Interest is expected from fashion designers and photographers.

The opening exhibition appropriately features paintings by the artists shortlisted for the Jerwood Painting Prize and includes controversial work incorporating elephant dung. Gallery Curator is sculptor Stephen Hepworth, former Director of The Tannery in Bermondsey and an SE1 resident, who has exhibited in Paris, Antwerp and Zurich.

Re-launching with Amadeus

Wednesday 21 October is the opening night of Amadeus at the Old Vic. After the packed houses for the Iceman Cometh there has been an uncertain dark summer for the 181 year old theatre with rumours of conversion to a club. But now the new management, complete with the Oscar-winning Kevin Spacey on the board, has saved the day to allow the historic theatre to take its natural place as part of the re-born SE1. Peter Hall's touring Amadeus production, starring David Suchet, will be previewing from Thursday 15 October. This has always been the traditional time for residents to see a new show and there should be a good number to celebrate the Old Vic's return for the millennium.

Flower Festival brings medieval atmosphere

“We shall put Chelsea firmly back in its place” says Provost Colin Slee when speaking about the Flower Festival at Southwark Cathedral for four days from 1 October.

The National Association of Flower Arrangement Societies is providing the floral Shakespeare and Southwark theme. Admission is £5 in aid of Marie Curie Cancer

Care but there will be normal free admission to the Sunday services which will give the rare opportunity to experience worship in a nave free of chairs as in medieval times.

•Choral Evensong will be broadcast from Southwark Cathedral on Wednesday 7 October. The live broadcast is on BBC Radio 3 at 4pm. Those wishing to be present are asked to arrive early.

which it has become better known as MOMI. But soon the riverside may have MOMA too.

Top design consultancy Wolff Olins is currently looking at the image possibilities for the Tate's new Museum of Modern Art. The acronym MOMA, or 'MOMA London', has already been put to the Tate but a final decision is not expected until next year.

Meanwhile MOMI is marking its birthday with a look at the best British film in its Colonnade Gallery. Other special features this month at MOMI include a display of Looney Toons artwork as a tribute to Warner Bros 75th anniversary.

Apple tree for Bankside

The Brogdale Horticultural Trust, home of the National Fruit Collection, has donated an apple tree to be planted on Bankside during a harvest celebration on Sunday afternoon 25 October. The variety was first recorded in the 17th century and is believed to have been grown in London during Shakespeare's time. Bankside is the former garden of Winchester Palace.

Brogdale's old variety organic apples are on sale this autumn at Neal's Yard Dairy in Borough Market's Park Street.

SE1 is top European urban area says Minister

“The most exciting part of any city in Europe” was how Minister for London Nick Raynsford described the SE1 riverside during a visit to the Oxo Tower last month.

A week later the minister was on Bankside for the topping out of the new Tate Gallery which he forecast will “become the jewel in the crown of London's reviving south bank”.

Nick Raynsford confirmed that within 18 months there will be a riverboat service linking the Tate at Millbank with Bankside's Tate Gallery of Modern Art. Lars Nittve, the Bankside Director, promises “a dream exhibition” for the opening in 2000 with Picasso's Three Dancers among the paintings on show.

Book Review

Livebait Cook Book

Theodore Kyriakou loves fish so much that when he came to England and failed to find a good fish shop he opened his own. The site he chose was a little tiled restaurant in The Cut now known as 'the original Livebait'. Kyriakou's devotion to fish began when he collected shellfish for his father's shop and today he still insists that fish is seasonal. So Livebait's menu is planned around what is available. He still prefers diver caught scallops to dredged and wild salmon to farmed. Readers of his new Livebait Cookbook (Hodder & Stoughton £20) will be pleased to learn that October is the best period for Dover sole. Now we have the recipes it's time maybe for Livebait to reopen its short-lived wet fish counter at its restaurant in The Cut

Art & Fashion Century Review

The Millennium Review begins on the South Bank with the Hayward Gallery's ambitious show called Addressing the Century -100 years of Art & Fashion. The story begins in Paris with the dawn of Modernism and explores the developments in art and fashion as they progress in parallel and touch until fusing in the 1990s. In the Dressing Room visitors can handle the latest fashions and even try on some items from tomorrow's designers who may be the 2000 big name. All the great names are here from Matisse through to Dalí and André Courrèges to Caroline Broadhead.

Music Matters

Music at Royal Festival Hall

A Suzuki Centenary concert is to be held at the Royal Festival Hall on Sunday 25 October. Shinichi Suzuki, who died earlier this year aged 99, was the great music teacher who believed that all children given the right environment have the ability to learn to play a musical instrument to a high standard. Over 800 children aged between four and eighteen will be playing violin, cello, flute, piano and guitar in a programme from the Baroque to the Beatles. Organised by the British Suzuki Institute, tickets £6 to £25 are available on 0171 960 4242. But before the Suzuki Sunday there will be the annual Folk in the Fall '98 which includes free lunchtime foyer events on 3,4,8, 9 and 10 October

Church Focus

The Borough's Music Church

Henry VII's Lute Player was once rector of St George the Martyr in Borough High Street so it is appropriate that the church is playing an important role in the Southwark Festival by having extra lunchtime concerts. Indeed the church has all the status and long history of one of the City churches across the Thames. Even its interior frieze has the arms of three livery companies who contributed to the refurbishment a century ago. Dickens had 'Little Dorrit' baptised here and she now appears in a window. The author had known the church since childhood when he visited his father in prison nearby. Today it's open every Saturday and of course Tuesday lunchtimes for music.
