IWM reopens

The Imperial War Museum reopens its doors on Monday 29 July after nearly seven months of closure.

The museum marks its partial reopening with the major new family exhibition Horrible Histories: Spies. Based on the popular children's book and TV series, visitors will be immersed in the world of Second World War spy-craft including codes and ciphers, disguises, camouflage and gadgets.

The museum is also launching IWM Contemporary – a new programme of exhibitions and events by leading artists and photographers whose work is in response to war and conflict.

Work to prepare the museum for the First World War centenary commemorations in 2014 continues. For the next two years visitors will enter through the side entrance. Circulation around the museum building will be limited with the main atrium and large objects covered from view.

Bastille Day in Borough & Bankside

London's largest free Bastille Day festival will be held in and around Bankside and Borough Market on Sunday 14 July.

Now in its sixth year, the festival will host a feast of culinary and creative delights. Throughout the day and evening the market will be at the heart of the celebrations with great food from their array of French traders, wandering performers and a French themed demonstration kitchen.

The programme includes a traditional 14 July waiters' race contested by staff at local restaurants, pétanque, an artisan craft market selling gifts and vintage ephemera and books, creative workshops, party games, bilingual story telling, face painting and gastronomic film screenings.

Axelle Lemaire, French MP for Northern Europe, will be attending the festival to make her first address to French citizens living in London.

Visitors can drop into a French Salon to find out about the French in London, enjoy classic dishes at a range of restaurants and Bastille Day discounts in several Bankside attractions.

The festival will be brought to a close with a traditional open air party around Borough Market until 10pm with live music, DJ, dancing and singing.

"The Bastille Festival promises to be an unforgettable celebration bringing together families and food lovers alongside London's French-speaking communities and Francophiles for a great day out," said Peter Williams, chief executive of co-organisers Better Bankside.

Monday 1 July UNKNOWN WARRIORS: READINGS BY THE NATIONAL THEATRE

11am; £12 (conc £8) from
<http://lw2013-uw.eventbrite.co.uk>
In a programme of readings from poems, plays, letters and blogs, National Theatre actors reflect the new reality of warfare. "The warring nations are engaged, not only soldiers, but men, women and children. The fronts are everywhere. The trenches are dug in the towns and streets. The front lines run through the factories." When Churchill said this, in 1940, he was anticipating the unfamiliar horrors to come. Seventy years on, the community is often at the heart of a war zone, and the hallmarks of earlier conflicts - battlegrounds, massed lines of soldiers, even uniforms - are almost a thing of the past. CHILDREN OF THE SUN

Lyttelton Theatre; In repertoire; £12-£34
Maxim Gorky's darkly comic play (1905), adapted by Andrew Upton, depicts the new middle-class in Russia, foolish perhaps but likeable, as they flounder about, philosophising, yearning, or scuttling between test tubes, blind to their impending annihilation. Howard Davies directs a cast which includes Lucy Black, Matthew Flynn, Florence Hall, Paul Higgins, Gerald Kyd, Emma Lowndes, Maggie McCarthy, Justine Mitchell, Rhiannon Oliver and Geoffrey Streatfeild.

THE AMEN CORNER

Olivier Theatre; In repertoire; £12-£34
Rufus Norris directs James Baldwin's play with a cast including Eric Kofi Abrefa, Marianne Jean-Baptiste, Sharon D Clarke and Lucian Msamati. As the gospel singing soars, Sister Margaret, uncompromising pastor of her Harlem church, has a congregation already in revolt against her hardline leadership. Their resentment escalates with the return of her absentee husband, a trombone-playing sinner, and the wayward conduct of her formerly paragon, musical son. Charges of hypocrisy hang in the air and Margaret's devout world looks perilously close to falling apart. Beautifully expressed through the rousing beat of the gospel choir, the community's sense of love, grief and spiritual survival is given full voice in the National's production of James Baldwin's 1965 play.

HARRY THE SIXTH

In repertoire; £5-£32
Following the death of Henry V, celebrated for having united England and subjugated France, divisions appear at the highest levels - first between those around the infant Henry VI, later between the two great factions in English politics: the houses of Lancaster and York. Only the young Lord Talbot, locked in combat with the bewitching and enigmatic Joan of Arc, seems capable of redeeming a divided and dishonoured kingdom.

THE HOUSES OF YORK AND LANCASTER

In repertoire; £5-£32
The saintly Henry VI is undermined by his nobles, especially the ambitious Richard, Duke of York, and by the Kentish rebellion, led by the charismatic Jack Cade, popular champion and savage critic of England's social inequality. The plays which make up Shakespeare's Henry VI create a world without ideology; a savage time, when the heroes are not kings, but formidable women, such as Joan of Arc, or rebels, such as Jack Cade.

PAINTING LONDON UNDERGROUND: EWING PADDOCK

In June 2009 Ewing Paddock began the personal project of making paintings of people in the London Underground. To make the idea practical, he first built a replica section of Tube seats in his studio so that his invited 'passengers' could sit and be painted - without the disturbance of arriving at a new station every two minutes. The Tube is the place to observe Londoners in all their glorious diversity and he's tried to reflect this in the paintings. The 25 canvases on show depict over seventy people, the result of an absorbing three years' work. The replica tube seats will also be on display.
